

PARENT-TEACHER CONFERENCES

Tips for Parents

It's Parent-Teacher Conference Time!

Parent-teacher conferences are a great way to communicate with your child's teachers. Please review this guide as it provides suggestions for a productive and successful conferencing event. Working together, our goal is a positive experience for everyone, especially your child.

TOGETHER, WE CAN!

Parents are a child's first and most important teacher. As partners in the educational process, both you and your child's school have something in common: For your child to learn! When you meet with the teacher, you can each share important information about the talents and needs of your student, as well as have meaningful discussion on how your child can continue to acquire the knowledge and skills needed for lifelong success.

What to Expect

As you prepare for your parent-teacher conference, here is what you can expect:

✓ A Two-Way Conversation

Like all good conversations, parent-teacher conferences are best when both people talk and listen. The conference is time to learn about your child's progress in school:

- Ask to see data about your child's attendance, grades, and test scores.
- Find out if your child is meeting school expectations and academic standards.
- Talk with your child's teacher about what your child is like at home.
- Share information about your child's skills, interests, needs, and goals, so you and the teacher can work together to help your student succeed.

✓ Emphasis on Learning

Parent-teacher conferences focus on how well your child is doing in school. They also emphasize how your student can do even better. To prepare for this dialogue:

- Look over your student's homework, tests and notices.
- Bring a list of questions to ask the teacher.

✓ Opportunities and Challenges

Teachers want your child to succeed. It is important to hear positive feedback about your child's progress, as well as be receptive to discussion for areas of improvement.

- Think about your child's strengths and challenges before the conference.
- Be ready to ask questions about ways you and the teacher can help your child with some of his or her challenges.
